Director's biography:

Manuel Mendieta "Manolo Mendieta" studied communication science at ITESM Monterrey. In 2005 he founded the project Spunco and began his professional career as a real-time video performer working for several international music artists. In 2009 the company moves in a new direction, producing and directing his first short film "FREE FALL," a project with a message of freedom, light and evolution. This begins a second creative stage, giving birth to SPUNCO FILMS a motion pictures production company, where he continues to work as a Producer, Director and Underwater Cinematographer. In 2011 Manolo co-produced the short film "EL FIRULETE," directed by Carlos Algara and Carlos Ramirez, which has been presented at several international film festivals such as Rain Dance in London and the FIC of Morelia México. Through 2012 and 2013 he produced and directed, along with Juan Pablo Maturana, the short documentary "CABO PULMO," looking to create awareness and communicate the importance of recovering life in our Oceans. The film promotes methods to achieve this that can be replicated worldwide. Currently, more than nine years into his professional career and with a established company, Manuel focuses on his assumed life mission and passion: The Ocean and the preservation of marine life. This initiated the production of his first feature 3D Documentary code named "BLUE MEXICO," with expectations of release in 2016.
